JUNE 7, 2015

Katonah Village Library, *Birds, Birding, and Weather, 7:00 pm. Refreshments served at 7:00 pm, lecture begins at 7:30 pm. No one escapes the weather, least of all birds. Because they spend their entire lives outside, weather has a huge influence on their movements and migration. The more birders understand about the impact of weather on birds, the more productive their birding decisions will be. An autumn forecast for a passing cold front? Watch for south-bound birds heading to their wintering grounds. A warm front that stalls over the coast on a spring morning? Look for a fallout of warblers. Lakes to the north starting to freeze? Get ready for wintering waterfowl. Come by and learn with Patrick Comis Director of Bird Conservation for Audubon Connecticut.
