John Jay Homestead, Farm Market - 9 am to 1 pm, 400 Jay St., Katonah; 232-5651.

Bedford Audubon, Bylane Farm, 35 Todd Rd, Katonah. Sessions at 10am & 1pm. Lunch at 12pm & guided walk at 3pm, NOFA Organic Land Care credits available | ASLA credits pending $75/session or $140 for both, 2 credit hours/session $15 lunch. This new two-part course explores how meadows, woods, and the continuum of habitat types can be replicated in gardens and natural areas of all sizes.

The morning session—The Sunlit Landscape—explores design, establishment, and management techniques for native meadows, old fields, and shrublands.

The afternoon session—The Shaded Landscape—delves into designing, establishing, and managing native woodlands, woodland edges, and hedgerows.

Each session covers key ecological concepts and design considerations, practical establishment and management techniques, as well as often overlooked aspects like self-proliferation, natural recruitment, and succession.

Larry will also lead a guided walk of Bedford Audubon's Leon Levy Native Garden, one of his designs, at Bylane Farm, and the adjacent old field habitat of the James Ramsay Hunt & Mary Welsh Parker Sanctuary.

This exhibition brings together the work of contemporary artists who transform natural and man-made materials and provide new pivots and vantage points onto our contemporary environment. Throughout the exhibition there is an abiding sense of how contemporary artists create enlightening and unexpected encounters with the objects and things that shape our day-to-day situations. Their work prompts deep experiences of the actual and imaginative relationships that we have with our environment and also our positions within it. This exhibition is curated by Charlotte Cotton.

Katonah Village Library, Fall Book Sale, Saturday, October 24th - Saturday, October 31st.

Book Sale will feature a large, well-organized and affordably-priced selection of books from all genres, including specially selected “staff picks” and books of local interest. Going well beyond the printed word, the Sale’s wares include audiobooks, DVDs, sheet music, games and puzzles, and music CDs. And there’s good news for audiophile traditionalists: “We’ve had so many shoppers ask us in the past, ‘Do you have vinyl records?’” said Book Sale Coordinator, Mary Hoholick. “Well, this year we do!”

Homemade treats and seasonal beverages will be available for purchase during the event’s opening weekend to fortify and refresh early shoppers. Despite the considerable time and sweat equity from many Library volunteers to make the Book Sale a reality, they feel the result is well worth it. Remarked Hoholick, “People tell us it looks wonderful -- like an old-fashioned independent bookstore.”

The schedule for the Book Sale is as follows: Friday, October 23, 6-9 p.m.
